SYNOPSIS OF COMMON LAW PLEADING AND PROCEDURE IN CIVIL ACTIONS

RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 28 pages. Dimensions: 9.7in. x 7.4in. x 0.1in. This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1910 edition. Excerpt: . . . pleadings until in the nature of things it reaches a limit and meets with a demurrer or traverse. 62. REPLICATION. This is the third regular pleading in consecutive order, or the second regular pleading of plaintiff, and if he does not demur it is his only alternative if he answers at all. As traverse, confession and avoidance, and estoppel have already been discussed, nothing remains to be said except as to a new assignment and traverse de injuria, for in other respects the replication is similar to the pleas above mentioned. These are peculiar to the pleadings at this stage and are never found except in a replication, as a dilatory plea and general issue are never found except in the plea. If defendant's plea missed the mark set him by plaintiff because of the indefiniteness of the declaration, and was addressed to facts other than those on which plaintiff relied and which he intended as his cause of action, instead of taking the ordinary steps in pleading plaintiff would find it necessary to restate his cause of action in the replication by employing more certain terms or a more definite allegation of the facts relied on, and thus set the defendant right and permit him to rejoin thereto according to the corrected form and real meaning. For example: If plaintiff had suffered two assaults, one of which was justified, but he did not sufficiently distinguish between them, so that defendant pleaded in...
