The boy was encouraged to visit rooms, read courses of study, decide upon his own gradeobjective (A5) and work toward it according to his own plans. He succeeded. He entered his grade, did satisfactory work, behaved properly, planned his next few years of life to include progress in mechanics, and was considered industrious, intelligent, responsible and ambitious. CHILD TRAINING: FEAR1 Fear is perhaps the most common emotion which human beings experience, yet it is extremely doubtful if the child has any inherent fear at birth. Most fears are produced by some experience through which the individual has had to pass in early life. In dealing with children we are From Mental Hvgiene Bulletin, April, 1925. very prone to speak of their foolish fears, yet they are foolish and unreasonable to use as adults simply because of our inability to understand how certain experiences have left upon the mind of the child impressions and feelings which govern conduct for a long time. There appear to be two distinct types of fear--what might te called objective and subjective fears. The first are fears of things which can be seen or heard, like animals, policemen, doctors, lightning, guns, and high places. The subjective fears are more intangible and the causes are very hard to find. They are based on the feelings and attitudes of the child to something which he has heard and upon which he as brooded without daring to express his fear. Children...
