Parson's Porch Books. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 142 pages. You are about to embark on a uniquely postmodern adventure. Postmodern spirituality is profoundly experiential, fluid, dialogical, and relational. Uncomfortable with fixed doctrines and institutional orthodoxy, the post-modern spirit seeks holiness and wholeness in experiencing God in ordinary as well as dramatic experiences, mediated through daily tasks, intimate relationships, clusters of friends gathered in times of celebration and pain, and moments of awe and wonder in which new energies and insights stream into our lives. Post-modern spirituality experiences the Divine in moments of creative transformation in which prayer, worship, contemplation, service, and healing embrace, in an ever-moving now, both ancient wisdom and future hope, in ways that engage all the senses as portals of revelation. Faith is fluid, emerging, and evolving, as personal and communal spirituality integrates the wisdom of Christianity with that of Buddhism, Islam, Judaism, Hinduism, new spiritual movements, contemporary physics, complementary medicine, and earth-based faiths. At such a time as ours, an emerging, vital, transformed and transforming Celtic spirituality provides a way of wholeness for pilgrims within and beyond Christianity. The way of Celtic Christian spirituality finds divine revelation in the cells of bodies, the glistening waters, the colors of the rainbow, and the human imagination. Celtic Christianity experiences God in all things and all things in God. God is found in the rising of the sun and the rising of the Crucified One. I invite to join me in a pilgrimage of the spirit that embraces the wisdom of Celtic spirituality in dialogue with the emerging wisdom of process-relational theology, contemporary physics, global and complementary healing, and religious pluralism. Inspired by post-modern, process-relational spirituality, this Celtic spiritual pilgrimage joins theology and spirituality in dynamic, lived experience and personal narrative. Though well-grounded in constructive Christian theology, this...
